Thank You to Covina Area Emergency Aid

The Covina Area Emergency Aid recently provided two checks to the YWCA SGV Intervale Senior Services Program, one for meals-on-wheels and the other for care for Covina's elderly residents. Thank you to Nancy Purnell, Harry Anderson, and Richard Allen, board members of Covina Area Emergency Aid, for this contribution and for the many people you have assisted. We are saddened that after 79 years of service to the community providing food and care, the Covina Area Emergency Aid had to close its doors. We will miss you.

Meredith Flanaghan:
Three Decades of Tennis and Service

It's been three decades since Meredith Flanaghan took up tennis - and just as long since she took up the cause of helping victims of domestic violence. She had just moved to Covina from Connecticut after 20 years as a medical technologist. Now she was reinventing herself as an interior designer.

"I wanted to make new friends, so I started playing tennis at the Claremont Club," recalls Meredith. There, she met Ann Baker, who talked her into helping out with a charity tennis tournament to benefit the YWCA's WINGS program. Once she got involved, she was hooked, admits Meredith.

"We have so much fun, and we all feel good about working for such a good cause," she says. "My heart goes out to these women who have been abused and have no place to go. The children need help too and that's why we started Little Wings, a counseling and mentoring program for youngsters."

Meredith says she is proud that in the last 35 years, the WINGS Classic committee has raised $2.5 million for critical services that enable domestic violence victims to start a new life and become independent. Since the tournament is entirely volunteer-run, 95 percent of proceeds go to the WINGS domestic violence program.

"The reason I keep volunteering after all these years is because everyone on the whole team is so wonderful," says Meredith. "Many of us have been doing this for 10, 20, 30 years and we have become great friends."

The 39th WINGS Classic will be held at The Claremont Club (1777 Monte Vista Avenue, Claremont) on May 4, 2012, from 8am to 2pm.

Newest Board Member Natalie Clark Wilson Has Compassion for Children

Growing up as the oldest of five children in a family of step, half and adopted siblings, Natalie Clark Wilson developed an instinct for care giving and compassion for children. Now 26 years old and a new member of the YWCA SGV board of directors, she is one of the youngest to serve in that capacity.

Nevertheless, Natalie has plenty of experience and great passion for the work of the organization. As a nanny for a celebrity family's three school-aged children, she also finds time to volunteer as a sexual assault counselor at Project Sister in Pomona.

"I have counseled women who were raped and sat with them while they were interviewed and examined," says Natalie. "Seeing these women, I understand how important it is to educate and empower them so they can move beyond being a victim and instead feel like a survivor."

Natalie has also counseled HIV patients and volunteered in other human service agencies such as Camp Laurel and Prototype Women's Center.

A graduate of Cal State Fullerton, majoring in human services and psychology, Natalie has set her sights on a career in the nonprofit field, working with women and children.

She says she is learning so much as a new board member, especially from the advocacy training that featured Congresswoman Judy Chu. "I am proud to be part of an organization that serves the community in so many ways - from teen programs to helping domestic violence victims to serving the needs of seniors - there is no other agency that is doing all that and doing it so well," she says.

Natalie was born in San Bernardino and lives in La Verne with her parents. ■

Homeless DV Families Can Get Financial Help Through YWCA

Since most of us are just a few paychecks away from being homeless, there's a new program for homeless victims of domestic violence, stalking or sexual assault offered by the YWCA SGV that could help you or someone you know who needs to find a new place to live.

Through a grant from Office of Violence Against Women (OVW), families like Joann's (not her real name) are receiving flexible financial assistance for their monthly rent to help them transition from homelessness to permanent housing.

Joann and her four children escaped an abusive relationship, but after spending six months sleeping together on a relative's sofa, she knew it was time for her family to move on. Even with assistance through CalWORKs and GAIN to augment her salary in her full-time job as a receptionist, she was unable to find an affordable apartment that would take her entire family.

And with the first and last month's rent, plus security deposit required, she found it difficult to come up with the cash needed to move in.

Then Joann heard about the YWCA SGV's new housing assistance program, and after passing the screening process (limited to homeless victims of domestic violence, stalking or sexual assault who are employed or have proof of a regular source of income), she received help from housing specialist Walter Solorzano.

"I knew of an apartment owner who was open to renting to families in tough situations like this," says Walter. "I referred Joann to this owner and they were able to work it out."

In addition, the program can potentially provide six month's rental assistance to homeless victims of domestic violence, stalking or sexual assault. "The idea is that we empower people to make the transition, but over time they are able to be fully independent and self-supporting," says Walter.

Free Program Helps Mature Workers Find Jobs

For Pat, who had been employed all her adult life, losing her job as a quality assurance manager in the garment industry was a big blow. Fifteen months later, her unemployment benefits have run out and she was getting desperate and depressed. But thanks to a new free program offered by the YWCA SGV and Women at Work, a Pasadena-based job training and counseling organization, Pat is feeling much more optimistic today.

"I have three job interviews this week and I know I will land something soon," says the 63-year old El Monte resident. "Stella Zarate from the YWCA knew just what I needed to do to change the wording of my resume and to help me think about how I bring experience and reliability to a job."

Pat is just the first of hundreds of people Stella hopes to help, as the YWCA SGV and Women at Work launch a new two-year program to provide mature workers, males and females 50 years and older, counseling and support for employment. By partnering with Women at Work, the YWCA SGV is leveraging job readiness services and skill-building classes already offered and providing additional one-on-one support especially for mature workers, including linkages with resources such as food, transportation, housing assistance, low-cost health care, etc. This new program is funded by the AARP Foundation.

"People over 50 sometimes feel that employers won't hire them because of their age," says Stella. "What we stress with both prospective employees and employers is that mature workers offer experience, commitment, professionalism and established work ethics."

Stella and partner Women at Work are making it a priority to build a network of employers who understand the benefits of hiring mature workers and want to hire them. According to national statistics, the number of weeks the average unemployed person is out of work is 38 weeks, but for people over 50, it's 44 or more.

For information, contact Stella at stellazarate@ywcasgv.org or call 626-214-9471. ■
